CORPORATE DATA EXCHANGE, INC.

Corporate Data Exchange, Inc. (CDE) is an independent tax-exempt research organization formed in 1975 to investigate economic concentration and corporate control. In addition to publishing the Stock Ownership Directory series, CDE maintains a data base on industries and companies to answer specific requests from public interest groups, trade unions, government agencies, and other organizations. Since its inception, CDE has provided information to such organizations as the National Council of Churches, the AFL-CIO, the U.N. Center on Transnational Corporations, and congressional committees.

The following publications are available from CDE:

Preface

This Directory is a unique reference guide to the nation's leading energy companies. In it, CDE profiles the largest stockholders of 142 companies, 131 of which sell their stock to the public.

This volume is the fourth in CDE's Stock Ownership Directory Series. Each volume presents accurate and detailed information on the principal stockholders of major U.S. corporations within a specific industry or economic sector. Future directories will cover the Fortune 500 Industrials and the Defense Industry.

Readers of our past directories will notice a significant change in the company profiles. In this Directory, the principal stockholders are ranked according to investment authority, rather than by voting power (see Part Two).

Additional company and industry data is currently being compiled by CDE for a forthcoming book on the energy industry.

Every effort has been made to guarantee the accuracy of the data. Invariably, some errors will occur in such a comprehensive compilation. We urge readers to call these to our attention and welcome suggestions about how to make our directories more useful.

Many individuals and organizations made significant contributions to this study, particularly in the identification of the largest companies in each energy industry. We are particularly indebted to Bethany Weidner, Vic Reinemer of the American Public Power Association, and Mark Hertsgaard of the Institute for Policy Studies, for their expert advice and assistance throughout the course of the research. We would also like to extend thanks to the librarians at the Business Division of the Brooklyn Public Library.

This study was made possible through grants from the United Presbyterian Church, United Methodist Church, CR Fund and Scally I Fund of the Youth Project, Sunrise Fund of the Youth Project arranged by David Hunter, executive director of the Stern Fund, W.H. and Carol Bernstein Ferry, Fund for Tomorrow, Institute for Policy Studies, and the Musicians United For Safe Energy.

The Editor

Guide to the Directory

This Directory consists of three parts. The first outlines the method for selecting the 142 companies profiled in the Directory. It also includes charts that rank each company within its industry. Part Two presents full profiles of the 131 firms which are public U.S. corporations. Each profile ranks the principal stockholders and identifies key institutional relationships. These public companies are listed throughout the Directory in UPPER CASE letters. A Control Chart follows these full profiles and identifies the major shareholders and institutional relationships for the 11 remaining firms. These companies, which appear in the Directory in Upper/Lower Case letters, include tightly-held and private corporations. Part Three contains four indexes from the company profile data. Unless otherwise noted all stock ownership data is for the first quarter of 1979.

The following abstract will help the user become more familiar with the Directory.

Part One

Introduction

This Directory presents profiles of the ownership and institutional relationships of 142 major energy companies operating in the United States. CDE selected companies from five energy industries:

- 20 petroleum refiners . . . each producing 150,000 barrels or more per day
- 38 coal mining companies . . . with U.S. mining production of 2 million tons or more per day
- 55 natural gas companies divided into three sectors . . . 20 producers with $54.5 million or more per year in gas sales to interstate pipelines; 15 local utilities with gas revenues of at least $300 million per year; and 20 interstate gas pipelines distributing at least 175 million cubic feet (mcf) per year
- 35 electric utilities . . . with total revenues of $650 million or more per year
- 34 nuclear-related companies divided into 4 sectors . . . 12 uranium millers with a capacity of 1,000 tons or more per day; 6 reactor manufacturers producing one or more plants from 1953 to 1978; 8 engineering/construction firms; and 8 manufacturers of reactor components (i.e., pumps, valves, etc.).

To select the profiled companies, CDE searched trade journals, business publications and government sources to develop a ranked list of the largest companies within each energy industry. Ranked lists for the natural gas and nuclear industries proved most difficult to obtain. Poor company reporting for natural gas permitted coverage of only about 40% of the industry's total sales. Different measures of a company's involvement in the nuclear field prohibited the ranking of those companies. Since private firms refuse to divulge even the most rudimentary data, it is impossible to be certain that all important companies were included.

For each industry the number of companies selected was determined by the overall size of the industry, the degree of concentration in each industry, and the relative importance of each industry to the national economy. The 142 profiled companies appear in seven ranking charts. Forty of these companies appear in more than one list. The stock of 131 companies is publicly traded in the United States. These are listed throughout the Directory in upper case letters, e.g., CITIES SERVICE CO. Eleven other companies are private or tightly-held firms and are listed in lower case letters, e.g., Drummond Corp.

1. Includes companies whose combined operations in 1977 produced over 2 million tons of bituminous and lignite coal. Anthracite coal constitutes less than 1 percent of total U.S. production and is therefore excluded.
2. Production figures for 50/50 joint ventures were divided equally half of the total attributed to each parent. In the case of an unequal joint venture, all production was attributed to the larger holder.
3. Company has joint venture with AMAX.
4. Company has joint venture with Peabody Holding Co.
5. Operators in this group are 50% owned by ASHLAND OIL. Since the other owners could not be identified, the total production was attributed to ASHLAND OIL.
6. Figures for TEXAS UTILITIES are estimates based on available data.
7. Company has 66.6% of a joint venture with Kiewit (Peter) & Sons Inc.
8. Company has 33.3% of a joint venture with PACIFIC POWER & LIGHT.
9. LTV acquired Lykes in December 1978. The combined production of these two companies would rank 30th.

1. Four criteria were used in selecting the companies:
   - A. Reactor Manufacturing: figure in parenthesis represents the number of domestic and foreign plants (operating and under construction) for which the company supplied reactors between 1953 and 1977. The companies listed account for 100 percent of the market.
   - B. Component Manufacturing: includes major suppliers of equipment for nuclear power plants including pumps, valves, piping, containment vessels, etc.
   - C. Engineering and Construction: figure in parenthesis (when available) indicates the number of power plants built in the United States since 1970 and under construction since 1978.
   - D. Fuel Cycle: includes major uranium milling and fuel reprocessing companies. The figure in parenthesis after "uranium milling" indicates the milling capacity per day as of 1-1-78. Total domestic capacity for 1977 was 40,710 tons per day and the companies listed account for 90 percent of this capacity. Fuel reprocessing includes the removal of useful uranium and plutonium from spent fuel rods.

   Other categories of nuclear-related activity have been noted where significant and available.
2. Owned 50 percent by ALLIED CHEMICAL, 25 percent by Royal Dutch/Shell Group, and 25 percent by GULF OIL.

Part Two

Introduction

Part Two consists of profiles of 142 major U.S. energy companies. Each profile presents the principal stockholders and institutional relationships that could be identified from publicly available source. Appearing first, in alphabetical order, are the profiles of 131 public U.S. corporations. These are followed by the Control Chart (p. 192) which profiles 11 tightly-held and private U.S. firms. All data appearing in this part is as of the first quarter of 1979, unless otherwise noted by an off-dating letter. The top five stockholders in each profile, as well as the relationships to law firms, investment banks and accounting firms, are cross-indexed in Part Three of the Directory (p. 195).

STOCKHOLDER INFORMATION

The Corporate Data Exchange followed a set of procedures to identify and rank stockholders who exercised Investment power over two tenths of one percent of a company's outstanding votable stock.[1]

I. Determining Total Votes

We reviewed the voting power of all classes of a company's stock — common and preferred — to determine which should be included in the total vote figure. In order to combine common and preferred holdings, all figures in the company profiles are expressed in terms of votes; all percentages are calculated on the basis of total votes outstanding for the included classes of stock. In the case of 20 companies, preferred classes were included making it possible to integrate significant preferred holdings.

II. Sources for Identifying Principal Stockholders

CDE systematically surveyed public sources to identify stockholders that invested or voted at least two tenths of one percent of the company's votable stock. The public sources can be divided into reports submitted by 1) stockholders, and 2) profiled companies.

1. Reports from Stockholders

Certain institutions and individuals file reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosing their holdings in public corporations while others voluntarily publish a portfolio listing. CDE included holdings identified in SEC Forms 13-f, 13-d, 13-g and 144 filed in 1979 and collected additional portfolios from non-reporting institutions. These documents reveal the number of shares over which a stockholder exercises investment authority (i.e., the power to buy or sell the securities). They further indicate if the stockholder exercises any voting power over these same shares. CDE's profiles therefore include the holdings of the following type of stockholders:

Bank Trust Departments: under SEC reporting requirements, about 200 banks and trust companies managing $100 million or more in stock must disclose their holdings.

Investment Companies and Advisory Firms: those selling stock to the public, no matter their asset size, must disclose their holdings on a quarterly basis. Private firms firms managing stock assets in excess of $100 million fall under the 13-f disclosure requirements. The holdings of about 300 firms were included.

Insurance Companies: about 100 life and property/casualty firms managing stock assets in excess of $100 million report their holdings under 13-f.

Private Pension Funds: most corporate pension funds are managed by banks, insurance companies, or advisory firms, and their stockholdings are reported by those institutions. However a few self-managed funds report under 13-f to the SEC and their holdings are included in our profiles.

Public Pension Funds: most state, county and municipal pension funds are self-managed and a few report under the 13-f requirements. CDE collected the portfolios of an additional 31 major funds in order to include their holdings.

Thrift and Savings Plans: the funds of these plans often hold very large blocks in the sponsoring company. CDE checked all the profiled companies for such plans, recorded their holdings, and determined if they used an outside trustee to oversee operations. Under previous stock disclosure regulations administered by the Comptroller of the Currency, a bank serving as plan trustee was required to include these shares in its total managed holdings. Unfortunately the SEC eliminated this requirequirement under the 13-f reporting system. CDE decided to list thrift and savings fund holdings under the plan's trustee, which often meant adding them on to the 13-f holdings of a bank.

Foundations: CDE included the holdings of all foundations with $50 million or more in stock assets. Some reported to the SEC under 13-f, while the portfolios of others were gathered from the institutions involved.

Educational Endowments: the portfolio holdings of over 100 universities and colleges were reviewed.

Individuals: those holding 5 percent or more of any class of a company's stock were identified through 13-d and 13-g filings. The holdings of executives not on the board are reported on Form 4, and individuals holding unregistered shares must file Form 144 when they sell part of their holdings.

2. Reports from Profiled Companies

Securities and Exchange Commission: each profiled company selling stock to the public is required to list in its proxy statement the holdings of directors up for election and the name of any individual or institutional stockholder controlling 5 percent or more of any class of the company's stock. CDE also checked secondary offering prospectuses and merger prospectuses for any additional stockholders.

III. Forming Complexes

A number of stockholders are in fact controlled by another entity (i.e. individual, family or corporation). In order to reveal the full power of all investors, CDE devised a method for consolidating the separate holdings owned or managed by a single complex. In analyzing each stockholder, CDE applied two standards to form such complexes:

1. Family Relations: the components of a family, including relatives, employees, estates, trusts, and family-controlled foundations, were combined into one complex. Companies or partnerships known to be 40% or more owned by family members were also grouped with these family interests.

2. Intercorporate Control: one corporation or government agency controls an institutional investor through one of three mechanisms:

Ownership of 40% or more of the company's voting stock.

Interlocking Boards where the majority of the directors or trustees are appointed by one institution.

Management[2] of one firm by another through a legal agreement, such as the management of mutual funds by an investment advisor, pension funds by commercial banks, and public pension funds by a government agency.

This process allowed the separate holdings of a complex to be aggregated and the total attributed to the head of the complex (i.e. ultimate parent). A single indentation indicates that the head of the complex owns at least 40% of the subentry's voting stock or controls a majority of the board. Family members are also given a single indentation when listed under a family complex. A double indentation indicates that the head of the complex controls the subentry through a management arrangement. In certain cases a complex involves both ownership and management and the listing of each subentry reveals its control relationship to the ultimate parent.

iV. Ranking the Identified Stockholders

All the stockholders were coded, key punched, and processed by computer using a special CDE-developed program. Each profile first ranks in descending order all stockholders with any investment power. Holders with no identifiable investment power are then ranked according to their voting power. Totals for each column are also presented along with a table listing the concentration for the top 5, 10, 15 and 20 principal stockholders.

NON-STOCK INFORMATION

In addition to the ranked list of top voting stockholders, each profile presents a breakdown of the company's operating revenues and income by business line for December 31, 1978, a description of its stock structure, a list of important outside institutional relationships maintained by the company, major changes in corporate control since the date of the profile (first quarter 1979), and the concentration among the top stockholders.

Business Lines: a breakdown of the company's operating revenues and income by primary areas of activity (percentages in parenthesis indicate a negative figure). These categories are not fully comparable between companies because detailed and uniform reporting is not required by the SEC.

Stock Structure: significant classes of voting stock, and for each class, the number of shares outstanding, the votes per share, the total number of votes, and the number of record holders. The combined total votes is provided where more than one class is listed. In the few cases where a company had more than three classes of voting stock, the classes with the same number of votes per share were combined into one listing.

Counsel/Washington Representative: a select list of the company's outside legal counsels, the fees they were paid, the service performed, and the year in which the service was provided. In the few cases where more than three law firms were identified, priority was assigned respectively to the general counsel, the Washington representative, the counsel for a securities' offering, for tax matters, mergers, and major court cases.

Investment Bank: a list of the company's major investment banks with the services they performed. Where more than three investment banks were identified, priority was given respectively to the lead underwriter for the latest stock issue, the lead underwriter for the latest offering of debt securities, the financial advisor in the last important merger or acquisition, and the agent in the last private placement of debt securities.

Accountant: the accounting firm which audits the company's financial statements.

Changes in Control: the acquisition of the company by another since the date of the profile (first quarter 1979) and select changes in very large stockholders.

Concentration: the cumulative holdings of the top 5, 10, 15 and 20 stockholders.

NOTES

1. The study used definitions of investment and voting powers developed by the Securities and Exchange Commission for the application of 13-f regulations. Under investment authority we included all shares over which the holder has sole or shared investment discretion. We also included any shares over which the holder exercised trustee power in the case of thrift and savings plans. Voting power includes shares over which the holder has sole or shared voting authority. We have excluded custodian holdings, i.e., shares over which the institution has no investment or voting authority but merely acts in a safekeeping capacity.

2. The term management is used in two distinct ways. On the one hand, the term is used to describe the administrative power exercised by an investment advisor over a mutual fund. In other instances, the term is used to describe holdings over which institutional investors exercise any management authority, i.e. voting authority, investment discretion and trustee authority.

(1) RANK: Holdings ranked in descending order according to investment authority and voting power.

(2) FAMILY COMPLEX: Combination of identifiable holdings of all known family members and family-controlled trusts, foundations, and corporations.

(3) THRIFT AND SAVINGS PLAN: Includes thrift, savings, stock purchase and similar private plans that facilitate acquisition of stock by company employees. Excludes stock option plans limited solely to "key employees" such as officers/directors. Each plan entry is arranged to indicate how these shares are trusteed and voted. In the hypothetical example below, the Widget Co Thrift Plan holds 1,000 shares of Widget Co stock for 25 plan participants.

(6) TYPE OF STOCKHOLDER: A symbol used by the CDE to characterize certain stockholders. Indicates the principal activity of financial institutions whose corporate names do not contain key words such as "bank" and "insurance." The following four symbols are used:

< Diversified holding company
+ Investment bank or brokerage firm
* Investment company manager or advisor
Director/Officer of profiled company

(7) SUB-ENTRIES: Significant and identifiable sub-entities whose holdings are included in the total for the complex head. A single indentation indicates that the complex head owns at least 40% of the sub-entry's voting stock. Family members are also given a single indentation when listed under a family complex. A double indentation indicates that the complex head controls the sub-entry through a management relationship such as an investment advisory agreement or a trust agreement between a commercial bank and employee benefit plan.

Part One

Introduction

This volume, the fifth in CDE's Stock Ownership Directory series, presents for the first time who owns the Fortune 500 industrials. The ownership profiles identify and rank the largest stockholders in each company in an up-to-date, convenient reference format.

The Fortune 500 currently represent between two-thirds and three-quarters of the total assets and sales of all U.S. manufacturing and mining companies. Nevertheless this authoritative list fails to include many of the largest U.S. corporations. First, in order to be considered, a company must obtain at least 50 percent of its revenues from manufacturing and/or mining. This means a number of large diversified firms with significant manufacturing/mining operations are absent from Fortune's list, as well as from the other Fortune rankings (e.g. IU International, Schlumberger Ltd., Engelhard Minerals and Chemicals, Halliburton, etc.). Second, many large privately-held corporations, such as Cargill, Reader's Digest and Hearst Corp., do not appear in Fortune's list because they fail to disclose any financial and operating data.

This Directory includes extensive profiles of 456 of the total 500 companies listed in the May 1980 edition of Fortune Magazine. Of the remaining companies, 22 were acquired by other firms since the publication of the list; 16 are wholly- or tightly-owned by one or two families or companies and 6 are not stock companies. These 44 companies are listed in the chart following this introduction. The accelerated pace of mergers in the first half of 1981 has affected the ownership of a few companies which are profiled in the Directory.

The profiles rank any publicly-identifiable stockholder who exercised investment power[1] over two-tenths of one percent or more of a company's common stock. All data is for year-end 1980 with proxy information updated through February 1981 and holders of 5 percent or more updated through May 1981. Holdings have been adjusted for all stock splits and stock dividends through year-end 1980.

In the past, CDE's Directories have also listed each holder's voting power. Upon further review of the SEC's reporting criteria for 13(f) institutions, CDE decided to eliminate voting power because the information proved unreliable. On the one hand investment company managers disclaim any voting authority over stocks held by their managed funds. On the other hand institutional investors are only required to report their voting authority for those shares over which they have sole or shared investment power. Holdings for which they do not exercise investment discretion, but which they vote, are not reported.

I. TOTAL SHARES OUTSTANDING

This figure represents the number of common shares outstanding as of December 31,1980. In 12 cases we added certain classes of votable preferred because they represented a significant proportion of the total votable securities (i.e. 20 percent). This made it possible to identify significant holders of votable preferred. These 12 cases are indicated by a bullet next to the total number of shares outstanding.

II. PRINCIPAL STOCKHOLDERS

CDE systematically surveyed public sources to identify stockholders who exercised investment authority over at least two-tenths of one percent of a company's common stock. The public sources can be divided into reports submitted by 1) stockholders, and 2) profiled companies.

1. Reports from Stockholders

Certain institutions and individuals file reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosing their holdings in public corporations while others voluntarily publish a portfolio listing. CDE included holdings identified in SEC Forms 13(f), 13D, 13G, 14D-1 and 144 filed in 1980 and collected additional portfolios from non-reporting institutions. These documents reveal the number of shares over which a stockholder exercises investment authority (i.e. the power to buy or sell the securities). CDE's profiles therefore include the holdings of the following types of stockholders:

Bank Trust Departments: under SEC 13(f) reporting requirements, banks and trust companies managing $100 million or more in stock must disclose their holdings.

Investment Companies and Advisory Firms: those selling stock to the public, no matter their asset size, must

1 RANK: Holdings ranked in descending order according to investment authority.

2 PUBLIC EMPLOYEE PENSION FUNDS: Identifies the administrator of state, county, and municipal public retirement systems.

3 OFFDATING: Holdings are for year end 1980 unless followed by a letter which indicates the following dates:

Period	1977	1978	1979	1980
1st Quarter	X	A	E	J
2nd Quarter		B	F
3rd Quarter	Y	C	G
4th Quarter		D	H

4 SUB-ENTRIES: Significant and identifiable sub-entities whose holdings are included in the total for the complex head. A single indentation indicates that the complex head owns at least 40% of the sub-entry's voting stock. Family members are also given a single indentation when listed under a family complex. A double indentation indicates that the complex head controls the sub-entry through a management relationship such as an investment advisory agreement or a trust agreement between a commercial bank and employee benefit plan.

5 FAMILY COMPLEX: Combination of identifiable holdings of all known family members and family-controlled trusts, foundations, and corporations.

6 THRIFT AND SAVINGS PLAN: Includes thrift, savings, stock purchase and similar private plans that facilitate acquisition of stock by company employees. Excludes stock option plans limited solely to "key employees" such as officers/directors. Each plan entry is arranged to indicate how these shares are trusteed and voted. In the hypothetical example below, the Widget Co Thrift Plan holds 1,000 shares of Widget Co stock for 25 plan participants.

Trustee	Voting Power	CDE Entry
Company	Internal	Widget Co Widget Co Thrift Plan–Internal (1000)
Bank	Internal	ABC Bank NA Widget Co Thrift Plan–Internal (1000)
Bank	Participants	ABC Bank NA Widget Co Thrift Plan–25 Participants (1000)
Bank	Participants; pass thru to bank	ABC Bank NA Widget Co Thrift Plan/25 Participants (1000)
Bank	Participants; pass thru to company	ABC Bank NA Widget Co Thrift Plan/Internal (1000)
Bank	Bank	ABC Bank NA Widget Co Thrift Plan (1000)

Employee Thrift and Savings Plans: the funds of these plans often hold very large blocks in the sponsoring company. CDE checked all the profiled companies for such plans, recorded their holdings, and determined if they used an outside trustee to oversee operations. Under previous stock disclosure regulations administered by the Comptroller of the Currency, a bank serving as plan trustee was required to include these shares in its total managed holdings. Unfortunately the SEC eliminated this requirement under the 13(f) reporting system. CDE decided to list thrift and savings fund holdings under the plan's trustee, which often meant adding them to the 13(f) holdings of a bank.

Foundations and Educational Endowments: CDE included the self-managed holdings of all foundations and educational endowments with $100 million or more in equity securities, which report under 13(f), and others with less than $100 million which were acquired through a private survey.

Individuals: those holding 5 percent or more of any class of a company's stock were identified through 13D and 13G filings. The holdings of executives not on the board are reported on Form 4, and individuals holding unregistered shares must file Form 144 when they sell part of their holdings.

Non-Financial Corporations: those holding 5 percent or more of a company's common stock report under 13D and 13G requirements and those managing $100 million or more in corporate equities must report under 13(f) regulations.

2. Reports from Profiled Companies

Securities and Exchange Commission: each profiled company selling stock to the public is required to list in its proxy statement the holdings of directors up for election and the name of any individual or institutional stockholder controlling 5 percent or more of any class of the company's stock. CDE also checked secondary offering prospectuses and merger prospectuses for any additional stockholders.

III. FORMING COMPLEXES

A number of stockholders are in fact controlled by another entity (i.e. individual, family or corporate). In order to reveal the full power of all investors, CDE devised a method for consolidating the separate holdings owned or managed by a single complex. In analyzing each stockholder, CDE applied two standards to form such complexes:

1. Family Relations: the components of a family, including relatives, employees, estates, trusts, and family-controlled foundations, were combined into one complex. Companies or partnerships known to be 40 percent or more owned by family members were also grouped with these family interests.

2. Intercorporate Control: a corporation or government agency controls an institutional investor through one of three mechanisms:

Ownership of 40 percent or more of the company's voting stock.

Interlocking Boards where the majority of the directors or trustees are appointed by one institution.

Management of one firm by another through a legal agreement, such as the management of mutual funds by an investment advisor, pension funds by commercial banks, and public pension funds by a government agency.

This process allowed the separate holdings of a complex to be aggregated and the total attributed to the head of the complex (i.e. ultimate parent).[2] A single indentation indicates that the head of the complex owns at least 40 percent of the subentry's voting stock or controls a majority of the board. Family members are also given a single indentation when listed under a family complex. A double indentation indicates that the head of the comp complex controls the subentry through a management arrangement. In certain cases a complex involves both ownership and management and the listing of each subentry reveals its control relationship to the ultimate parent.

IV. INDEX TO TOP FIVE STOCKHOLDERS

To facilitate the identification of the largest stockholders, we have provided a cross-index of the top five stockholders in each company. This index begins on page 201.

NOTES

1. The study used a definition of investment power developed by the Securities and Exchange Commission for the application of 13(f) regulations. It includes all shares over which the holder has sole or shared investment discretion. In the case of thrift and savings plans, we also included any shares over which the holder exercised trustee power. We therefore excluded all custodial holdings. Where two holders shared investment discretion over the same stock, we assigned the stock to one holder to avoid double counting the shares. However, it was not possible to do this in all cases because the documents did not always reveal the identity of both stockholders.

2. In certain cases the aggregation did not include some subentities with less than two tenths of one percent of a company's stock.
